

This architectural elevation drawing depicts a building facade oriented vertically. The structure is characterized by a complex roofline, with a prominent gabled section on the left side. The facade is punctuated by numerous windows of varying sizes and shapes, some arranged in groups. A central vertical element, which appears to be a staircase or a narrow tower, runs through the middle of the building. The drawing is executed in a black and white line art style, typical of architectural plans. The overall composition is highly detailed, showing the intricate geometry of the building's exterior.
